Social Circle.

The Ladies' Social Circle was entertained last Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Walter Becker. In the contest of the meeting Mrs. J. B. Ellison, Mrs. M. H. Cherrington and Miss Sadie McCray were awarded prizes. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. The visitors were Mrs. Barsha Work, Mrs. Will Kessler and Mrs. Fred Rochester, and Misses Sadie McCray, Lou Bowen, and Carrie Lutz.

Farewell Surprise.

The Ladies' Social Circle surprised Mrs. Walter Becker, last Wednesday evening, with a masquerade party in her honor, at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Tritsch. The masquers ranged from the simple and beautiful to the weird and uncanny, some of them being literally indescribable. They presented Mrs. Becker with a lovely hand-painted water tankard. The party was in the nature of a farewell to the honor guest, who left on Saturday for Orient, Ohio, where she and Mr. Becker will make their home for some time.

Ladies' Euchre Club.

The Ladies' Euchre Club met Friday evening at the home of Mrs. O. W. H. Wright, for the first time in several months. A very pleasant time was spent in the game, followed by refreshments of strawberries, ice cream, cake and coffee. Mrs. L. Warner and Mrs. John White were visitors.

Junia Club.

Miss Charlotte Work was hostess of the Junias at their regular bi-weekly meeting, Monday evening. Following several interesting discussions on roll-call topics, New Books and Their Writers, Miss Evaline Harrington read a paper on the question, Is Popular Taste in Literature Degrading?, and Miss Bird White presented an exposition of the subject of so-called Yellow Journalism. Mrs. F. M. McKay, Mrs. H. R. Harrington, and Mrs. H. J. Woodworth were club guests. The misses Rochester will entertain the club at their next and last meeting for this season, May 28.

Graduation

The custom of gift giving at graduation time is a very pretty one. When a youth or maid passes from school to college, to the work of an every day world, it is an event of a life-time—surely an occasion that well deserves being remembered. So, if there is a son or daughter, a favored nephew or niece, or anyone that you desire to remember on graduation day this year, we trust you will remember our preparedness to serve you. We have the kind of Jewelry that makes most acceptable graduation presents—we would be most happy to place the assortment before you.

W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Roy Comly on last Tuesday evening. After the transaction of business and all plans for the convention to be held next Tuesday at the M. E. Church having been matured, Mrs. Comly surprised those present by serving dainty refreshments.

Euchre Party.

Mr. Chas. Rose and Miss Mabel Rose entertained a large party with euchre, Tuesday evening. Sixteen tables were played, first honors being taken by Mrs. Bert Stedem, who received a silver spoon; Mrs. Hyson won second prize, a mayonnaise set. The out-of-town visitors included Mesdames Sam Preston and Anna Jeffries, of Nelsonville, Mrs. Fred Preston, of Athens, Mrs. H. J. Woodworth, of Haydenville, and Mrs. Wylie Thurness, of Columbus.

OUR FASHION LETTER.

The Trappings of Woe May Be Made Becoming.

WHITE CRAPE IS IN FAVOR

Although Sombre in Tone, Mourning Gowns Need Not Be Depressing. There Are Many Beautiful Fabrics Used in These Costumes.

All the pretty tricks of the manufacturers are resorted to in mourning materials. These fabrics are chifoned and softened in a manner particularly adapted to sombre fashions.

Black velvets and veillings for dressier wear and the new serges for hard service are the materials used in fashioning mourning frocks. For little dresses

SEVERE MOURNING COSTUME.
Just removed from shirt waist suit black pongee is a favorite fabric, as is soft dull silk.

"Best" mourning gowns are made of crepe de chine, trimmed either with self tucks, shirrings and platings or with a little dull jer or chiffon.

White crape is considered very chic and smart mourning for evening wear, with never a touch of black.

Sleeves on mourning costumes are generally of three-quarter length rather than the popular elbow, and long sleeves appear upon many of the handsomest confections.

Mourning hats are coquettish and display the all prevalent tilts, and sharp lines are softened with quantities of tulle. Some of the lightest and prettiest of the summer mourning hats are made entirely of malines. Crape makes attractive little toques laid in soft folds when adorned with posettes of the same material.

Buttons and braids in mourning are all of dull finish, and the ribbons used should be grosgrain. For girdles black and white belting is much liked.

The mourning gown illustrated is of black serge. The skirt has a triple hip yoke, from which the material gracefully falls at sides and back in soft lines. The front width is in panel effect. Narrow braid trims the skirt and blouse jacket. The smart neck trimming and collar are of crape.

FOR THE WEE FOLKS.

A charming hat for a little girl of eight or ten is of leghorn in a floppy round shape. The crown is of pink neapolitan straw arranged in a soft fashion. Tightly encircling the crown is a band of light blue flowers.

Large hats of English embroidery will be the favorite form of children's headgear this summer. There are delightful models formed of a combination of straw and embroidery simply trimmed around the crown with wreaths of wild flowers.

Among the newest hats for little girls is the "cantaloupe melon." It is somewhat like the old melon or dome shaped hat of the winter, but the hard line around the face is softened by rows of chiffon ruching or frills of lace, which constitute the most becoming setting for a small face with its fringe of fair curls.

A pretty little model of the melon description is carried out in pale blue ermine straw, the border ornamented with three superposed frills of white knitted Valenciennes lace. Two tiny bunches of forget-me-nots are half concealed on either side of the hat in a rosette of lace, while a bow of blue satin ribbon a shade deeper than that of the straw decorates the crown of the hat. Streamers of ribbon tie under the chin.

The illustration shows a pretty little hat for a small girl. It is of tan colored straw. Through the indented brim is run a scarf of soft brown silk fastened at the side in a knot with fringed ends.

POPULAR FABRICS.

Bridesmaids' hats, with strings, scarfs of lace or tulle and tiny bands, with bows at the sides, are picturesque features of the season.

Velvets are perennial favorites and are out in some beautiful new colors and combinations—striped, checked, plaided and embroidered. Some very attractive white velvets are plaided in moderate lines, but the design is obtained by the weaving, not the coloring, alternating lines of every sheer and heavier weave producing the effect. The same idea is developed in grays and mode colors, and sometimes over the one tone plaid surface will run a two or three inch check marked off in the finest hair line of some delicate pastel color.

Pongees of all kinds in their natural shades are modish this season. An exclusive shop is showing imported frocks of natural lined pongee trimmed in black satin, silk and velvet, brightened only by creamy lace at the collar and in the sleeves.

Lavender silk ties in a variety of shades are shown for men's wear and vie in popularity with those of green.

Children's coats of white serge in Russian style are finished with cuffs, collars and belts of scarlet and bright blue.

The hat sketched is of modore straw—that lovely golden color with a shimmer of brown in it. A soft, loose roll of bright green velvet is arranged about the crown, and the feathers are of the same emerald hue. This combination, though rather extreme, is one of the new millinery conceits.

The ladies of the Pochantas council served a very nice ice cream supper last Monday night.
